

Craniosacral aids cancer patient through chemotherapy.

In February 2011, My dad was diagnosed with Pancreatic Cancer (Adenocarcinoma-Malignant tumour), Stage III, non-resectable and therefore no surgical intervention possible. managed his condition. The prognosis given then was 6 months to 1 year. Things looked really gloomy. The oncologist put him on chemotherapy (with a Gemzar-Xeloda combo) to help manage the condition.

At that time, my dad had shown severe symptoms of the condition. These include chills, fatigue, lack of appetite and severe weight loss. He was also having very bad back pain. He had lost more than 10kg over about 3 months. No one picked it up as pancreatic cancer. He could not go anywhere indoors without a sweater pulled on.

I had a hard time convincing dad to start on BCST, and I thanked God till this day that Adida had pushed me to convince him. In the beginning, we worked on him almost everyday. With each treatment, my father can feel things changed in his body. His backpain will become much reduced after a session. On some occasions, he was so lethargic and low in energy before he got on the therapy bed. After session, he would come alive and that surprised me much. I remember clearly one session when he called my mother on handphone immediately after a session and talking somewhat energetically that he felt so awake and energy was coming back.

With Adida and dad's commitment towards the therapy, Dad got better each day from the symptoms. He is receiving BCST on a regular basis from Adida. What surprises many around us is how little the side effects from the chemotherapy were for my dad. Since February till now, apart from the fact that he has a tumour, he appears to be healthier than anyone of us at home. I came down with flu 2 or 3 times. Mum was down with cough twice. Dad was not affected in any way himself. He chose to rest himself at home on days when he had to go for his chemo Gemzar injection. On other days, he is out fetching mum to wherever she needs to go to, or to run errands, or have tea with his brothers. He has also gone on a holiday trip to Bali and cruises.

Dad also managed his condition through other modalities, such as TCM, supplementation and Qi Gong. However, he has a lot of confidence in BCST as his symptoms were very well managed by the therapy; he can TELL. In a session, he will feel his backpain subsides, his energy level increases, and he can feel things moving in his body in a good way. The therapy helped maintained the natural order and state of his body from the otherwise aggressive nature of the chemotherapy and radiotherapy treatment. He is a living testimony of how BCST can support health in a really amazing way.

Over the months, his cancer marker (CA19-9 for pancreatic cancer) drops and according to the oncologist's latest review, he condition is now considered stable.

To me, this is an absolute miracle and it has been an amazing journey so far.

Thank God for His mercy and grace, and for Adida who brought the gift of BCST into our lives.
